Julius Velic eleverly handles the role of the homeless hero, hired by McLean, the homeless hero, hired his trade, against timber thieves. Approached by Black Jack and Wessner, who have designs upon certain fine, trees. Preckles "cribitis traits of fidelity and courage that are characteristically Irish.

Faithful to his trust, he succeeds in outwitting the thieves, in saving the swamp angol, the girl he loves, from a failing tree, he is seriously hitured and goes to the hospital. He comes out at the end of a few months restored to health to find an uncle in the person of an Irish lord ready to restore to him the name and estate of his long lost father. Compileations of high and so-cial position cleared away. Freekles finds himself free to marry the girl of his choice.

Carrie Bellmore plays the "Swamp Angel" with vivacity. Digman Merideth, as Mrs. Pencan, and John S. Marbie, as her husband, furnish the requisite comedy in a very attractive manner. Frank furnish the requisite comedy in a very attractive manner. Frank furnish he as you will have a dignified and magnetic McLean,—Adv.
